Legal Aid for Those Who Suffer by Ejectment or Higher Rentals

As a result of the wide publicity given the rent situation through the Boston American and the formation of the Boston American Tenants' League, the Mayor's Committee on Rents and Housing, which has taken over that phase of the work of the State Commission on the Necessaries of Life, will now consider all cases of rent profiteering in Boston.

The State Commission has considered only profiteering in dwellings letting for $50 per month or less.

Although no plans for the new commission are yet complete as to procedure, it was said that the

Housekeepers' Head Lauds Rent Fight

Mrs. Ida Hobbard, president of the Housekeepers' League, is most emphatic in her indorsement of the Martin Hays bill. "There can be no two opinions on this bill, nor of the wisdom of joining the Boston American's Tenants' League," said Mrs. Hobbard.

"Eighteen months ago we tried, in our club, to get some action on this most outrageous rent situation. The need has existed for over a year. I indorse the movement most heartily, and next Tuesday, when our meeting takes place, I am going to put the bill before the club for indorsement, and ask every member to join the American's Tenants' League.

"Considering that all our members have had their experience with the rent situation, and that one of our members in particular had her rent raised from $100 a month to $200 a month, I feel confident of favorable action."

If the report of the capture of Vilna is correct it shows that the Bolshevik armies driving against the Poles have advanced about 115 miles in four days.

LEGAL AID FOR TENANTS AIM OF CITY BOARD

VICTIMS TO BE GIVEN COUNSEL

Quick Remedy for Existing Conditions Sought by City's Rent Probers

necessity for providing legal aid for tenants, to which attention has been called repeatedly by the American, will be taken up at once, and some means for employing counsel for tenants facing unjust eviction will be thought out.

Edward F. Condon, assistant secretary of the Transit Commission, will act as secretary for the new body, and his office on the sixth floor of No. 1 Beacon street will be open from 9 to 5 daily. Distressed tenants of both dwelling and business property may apply to him for relief.

Malcolm W. Nichols, head of the commission, indorsed the activities of the Boston American Tenants' League in his efforts to end rent profiteering by laying great stress on the necessity for immediate relief for tenants of all classes of property in Boston.

He stated that the commission will notify the clerks of the municipal courts at once to supply the commission with notice of any ejectment writs issued, and that steps will be taken to alleviate their distress.

He expressed the hope that the American would co-operate with the new commission in finding remedies for the rent situation.

A public hearing on the rent question will be held at the Aldermanic Chamber, City Hall, next Wednesday night.

Those at the first conference of the new commission besides Chairman Nichols were Secretary Condon, George E. Brock, of the Home Savings Bank, Edward T. Kelly, chairman of the Board of Assessors, Inspector Henry M. Pierce of Police Headquarters, and Dr. Spofford of the Board of Health.

DORCHESTER FOR LEAGUE.

A bundle of over 200 signed enrolment blanks in the Boston American Tenants' League reached the Rent Editor from Dorchester alone yesterday, in addition to many other signed blanks from the same section which came by mail, indicating the tremendous interest that this section of Boston is taking in the activities of the league.

Other sections of the city and of the State were also well represented by signed blanks.

Endorsements of the league in its backing of Representative Martin Hays to have remedial legislation passed continue to come in every mail.

Great interest is being manifested particularly in the worthy efforts of Mr. Hays to have a conference between the heads of the executive, judicial and legislative departments of the State before the enactment of any legislation, in order that the legislation may be better perfect.

The House committee on rules will hold a hearing on this matter at 3:30 next Tuesday afternoon, and those who believe that the highest paid servants of the Commonwealth, representing the keenest minds of the State, should confer on this important matter, should attend this hearing.

WOULD STOP EVICTIONS.

Mrs. Lucius M. Ferry, a physician of Cambridge, and president of the Ladies' Physiological Institute, considers the Martin Hays bill one that demands the attention of her club. "I have not studied the bill," said she, "but there is an much agitation on the rent question that we need to be informed about it. Of hand I should approve some such bill, particularly if it contained some provision by which a tenant who is served eviction notice, and after careful search is not able to find new quarters, shall not be summarily evicted. Such evictions have taken place, I know, and they seem very unfair to me. Our next meeting is the eighth of April, when I will place the Hays bill before my club members for action."

Mrs. W. T. Hersey, vice-president of the Massachusetts Daughters of Maine, acting at the request of Mrs. James H. Flint, the president, who is ill, told the American that she would be pleased to put the Martin Hays bill before her club members at the next meeting, the first Thursday in April, for their indorsement.

"This is an important matter," said Mrs. Hersey. "Everyone who has anything to do with rents, as tenants, knows of the conditions. There is much genuine distress due to the present housing situation."

WOMEN BACK HAYS BILL.

The Legislative Committee of the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association, at its recent board meeting, voted to refer the Martin Hays bill to the next board meeting for final action. Mrs. True Worthy White said in explanation: "We all felt that Representative Hays made a most lucid explanation of the situation and of the bill. When he had finished there was so much business which had to be finished, that the Hays bill was put over. We shall listen to arguments from the other side as we feel that in such an important matter both sides should be heard in order to give out action weight. At the next board meeting, then we shall vote on the Hays bill."

Mrs. E. W. Gebrecht, former president of the Fathers and Mothers' Club, gives the Martin Hays bill her personal endorsement. "I am sorry that the Fathers and Mothers' Club cannot take action on this bill," said she, "as we have to limit our work to needy children. But when your bill comes I know that you will not lack influential women to work for it. A ten per cent profit, as provided for in the Hays bill, seems to be quite enough for any landlord. I have so many friends who discuss the matter of undue rents among themselves that I know the issue is a big one. The present troubled time demands a proper working

"Germany will never consent to the French occupation of Frankfort," said Herr Mayer.

"In case allied troops enter the parts of Germany not occupied by them at present, the Ebert government might as well throw up its hands and accept a Red republic as inevitable."

'WILFUL MINORITY' IN STATE SENATE FOILS DAYLIGHT LAW DEMAND

DELAY IS BITTERLY SCORED

At Least 85 Per Cent. of Bay State Population Demands Saving

From all parts of the State pressure is being brought to bear upon the "wilful minority" that is attempting to block and forestall action in the State Senate on the daylight saving bill, which is demanded by at least 85 per cent. of the population.

Circulars are being distributed in the business districts. Thirty-one insurance firms have signed a petition to the Legislature demanding immediate passage of the measure. Thirty-three cotton concerns and ninety-five wool dealers, representing $200,000,000, have taken similar action.

Many cities in New England have passed ordinances for local daylight saving. The communities include Portland, South Portland and Eastport in Maine; Worcester, Marlboro, Fitchburg, Lynn and Clinton in Massachusetts; Manchester and Nashua in New Hampshire; New London, New Britain and Hartford in Connecticut.

Massachusetts cities are delaying putting their orders into effect until the Legislature acts, and most of the cities to the north will do likewise.

With daylight saving in effect in New York and New Jersey next week, there will be some confusion here. The Boston Stock Exchange will open at 9 o'clock and close at 3 p. m., instead of from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m., so as to conform with the time the New York Stock Exchange will be in session.

The move of the State Senate in postponing action until next Tuesday is bitterly criticised by business men. An amendment has been proposed which would cost the bill to go into effect until the last Sunday in April.

Commenting on what he termed "filly-dallying in the Senate," Edward F. Woods, chairman of the Boston of Commerce Daylight Saving Committee, said: "I presume that postponement was granted as a parliamentary courtesy, for many of those who voted for postponement are in favor of daylight saving.

MRS. NELSON IN NO HASTE TO WED

Brookline Divorce Will Not Leave State to Marry in Scoville

Mrs. Eva Guptill Nelson of Fuller street, Brookline, whose husband, Ernest Nelson, of Malden, recently divorced her following a sensational trial at East Cambridge, has been permitted the companionship of her seven-and-a-half-year - old daughter, Nancy, two days a week.

The mother was nearly heartbroken when she learned that Judge Sanderson had awarded the child to her husband. She believes, however, that her daughter's love for her will not change, despite their enforced separation for the remaining five days of each week.

The child is now being cared for by Mrs. Elizabeth Nelson, her paternal grandmother, at The Braemore, No. 164 Commonwealth avenue. Nancy's father is living in the same apartment, and a nurse has been engaged to assist in caring for her. The grandmother had an apartment at the Braemore, but since the court decision larger living quarters have been obtained in the same place to make room for father, daughter and maid.

WILL NOT WED IN HURRY.

Two days each week Nancy is given into her mother's keeping but she is not permitted to have her overnight. When a Boston American reporter called at the young Mrs. Nelson's home in Brookline Nancy was enjoying playing with a kiddie car and numerous other toys.

Friends of Mrs. Nelson say that she has no intention of hurrying to be married to Mortimer Scoville, the State street broker, before the end of the 24-year period limit which the law places on her remarriage here. While on the witness stand Mrs. Nelson testified that on the day before last Christmas, Scoville, whose wife had been suing him for divorce, proposed marriage to her and she accepted, the marriage to take place when both were divorced. Both are now divorced and their friends are looking forward to the next step in their unusual romance.

DICTAGRAPH IN HOTEL.

If Mrs. Nelson and Mr. Scoville set up a bona fide legal residence in another State they could marry at once. These friends of the couple say that Mr. Scoville has been loyal to Mrs. Nelson throughout her ordeal and they predict a happy ending to their romance.

It has been learned since the divorce that a dictagraph was installed in Mrs. Nelson's apartment at the Prince George Hotel, New York. No evidence relative to this instrument was introduced during the trial.

Boo Paris Actor With Wax Silk Tuxedo

Paris, March 27.—M. Damaz, famous actor and leader of men's fashions, startled an audience at the Theatre Francais by appearing in a tuxedo of waxed silk material, of the kind that this year's Spring dresses for women are made of.

A howl of protest went up from the audience, composed largely of fashionable "first nighters." They hissed and booed the actor's attempt to launch this novelty in masculine elegance mainly because it is in blatant violation of smart society's movement for economy and simplicity in dress.

The actor, however, announced that he would make fashion fond of the popularity of his innovation.

TO RECONDITION GERMAN SHIPS

Admiral Benson Plans to Develop All-American Merchant Marine

Washington, March 27.—Admiral William S. Benson, chairman of the Shipping Board, in his first general conference with newspaper men since taking office, said that his policy would be the development of an all-American merchant marine as one of the nation's most vital needs.

The fleet of former German passenger liners, which his predecessor, John Barton Payne, attempted to sell, will be reconditioned, and placed in service under the American flag, should the court injunction granted William Randolph Hearst be made permanent, Admiral Benson said. He added:

"We are studying the question as to the best use we can make of these former German ships. Nearly all of them will have to be reconditioned for passenger service. Since the court's action there has been little discussion from private steamship companies as to their ultimate disposition. Since the court has held that we cannot legally sell them, we will allocate them, but only to American companies."

Admiral Benson said that no question had been raised as to the title of the ships because of the rejection by the Senate of the treaty of peace.

"The ownership of these former German vessels is absolutely vested in the United States government as the ships of our own navy. They are not as much United States property as army transports, and are going to remain so," he asserted.

Admiral Benson warned the correspondents to be on the lookout for foreign propaganda tending to discredit operation of the American merchant marine, through reports of alleged accidents and breakdowns of Shipping Board vessels.

The function of the United States Shipping Board is to build up the American merchant marine," Admiral Benson said.

POLICE PUT OUT LIGHTS AT BALL

Arrest Five College Boys After Near Riot at Boston Hotel

Standing out as the "jazziest" and an altogether unexpected number on the program of the Greenwich Village arts costume ball at the Copley-Plaza was a Bohemian melee in which twenty police officers, 200 college students, many of them from Harvard, and Sonia, "Queen of the Village," took part. The affair ended in the arrest of five of the college boys on the charge of drunkenness.

The cases against three of the boys were not prosecuted. They gave the names of Louis Perkins, Windsor, Vt.; Barrol McNear, No. 24 Beck Hall, Cambridge, and Richard Currier of 8 Commonwealth avenue. James B. Mullowney and Kenneth B. Colbeth refused to give names to paper admitting that they had been intoxicated. They were tried and convicted, but the cases were placed on file.

The disorder started when the students sought to have the ball continued beyond the period permitted by the authorities and sat on the floor, hooting and creating a general disturbance. They called the affair a "holdup" and tried to overpower the police that they deserved more for their $5 admission.

FIGHT IN ANTEROOM.

Apparently many of the male attendants at the dance failed to experience any hardship through the prohibition law, for there was a distinct manifestation of the delightful activities of spirits—the net result showing in several rough-and-tumble fights in an anteroom of the main ball room floor.

At the height of the disturbance Lieutenant Francis Milligan of station 16 and three patrolmen, who had been stationed at the ball, swooped down on the noisest of the guests and ordered them outside.

They were herded together and escorted by three patrolmen and a mounted officer up Huntington avenue on the way to the station. At Exeter street they were met by the patrol and bundled into this vehicle.

FIVE ARE LOCKED UP.

At the station five of them were booked on the charge of drunkenness and the remaining indignant celebrators were discharged.

The ball, which gave every indication of being an artistic success, was sweeping its way along and despite the conviviality of some of the male guests, everybody was having a good time until the time when the delightful music stop under the provisions of the law.

Then the police turned off the lights and shut down the piano, and trouble began.

DONLAN DENIES ABUSE OF SICK

Claims Charges Against Long Island Hospital Are "Inspired by Malice"

Substantially every charge made by City Councillor Edward F. McLaughlin concerning the outbreak of influenza and the treatment of patients at Long Island Hospital is a "pure fabrication," inspired by malice and with the intent to "get" Mayor Peters and Commissioner O'Brien, Superintendent Charles E. Donlan declared in a report to the infirmary trustees.

Councillor McLaughlin charged that shutting down the heating plant to save coal brought on the epidemic, that patients were neglected by the doctors, that the unsteadiness of bed and person led to their being afflicted with vermin and bed sores. Forty-four patients died.

Dr. Donlan takes up the charges in detail and declares them false, adding: "Substantially every charge made was a pure fabrication and fixed in his (McLaughlin's) mind.

"Mr. McLaughlin said in his printed speech: 'I am not trying to bring any embarrassment upon the present administration.' In the presence of his colleagues, Messrs. Moriarty and Brickley, and Dr. Albert S. Hyman, the resident physician, Mr. McLaughlin said: 'We don't want to do anything to hurt Peters personally, but we are going to get Peters and O'Brien.'

Dr. Donlan admits that the building on Long Island are fireproof, and says he has called attention to this fact for several years without avail.

BARROW SAYS FRAZEE WILL NOT SELL BALL CLUB UNTIL FALL

BAD THROW IS COSTLY TO SOX

Kelly Scores Only Run of Game for Giants on Overthrow by Pitcher Hoyt

By JACK CONWAY.

New Orleans, La., March 27.—If you have a million and a half left after you pay the landlord, make the milkman and butcher smile, and purchase friend wife and the kiddies new outfits for Easter, you can buy the Red Sox. This was the cheerful announcement made today by Ed Barrow, who is a stockholder in the club as well as its proud manager.

When the Sox were at Hot Springs a couple of weeks ago, the ante was a million and a quarter. Then we hit the oil region. It is only natural the Boston Club's stock should benefit from the wave of prosperity in this sector of the Land of the Brave.

By the time the team gets back to Boston Headsman Harry Frazee may be asking for a couple of million Joy producers for his holdings. If this is his way of having a good time, who'd disturb his happy thoughts? It's no crime to ask a million or more above what people are willing to give for a commodity or interest.

Says Frazee May Sell in Fall

Barrow added that Frazee intended to hold the club until the Fall when he may sell. This is probably why Frazee is setting a price which no mere baseball man would meet. If Frazee were to get $700,000 for the club he would be handed a good figure.

Frazee, by the way, is trying to get Speaker, the former Holy Cross outfielder, from the Giants.

The Red Sox today started the second week of their barnstorming tour with the Giants. Two games are booked for this city. This was a joyful relief for the players, who are tired from traveling and playing baseball. The series was even at three all when today's game started. The Giants evened up the count by winning at Houston, 1 to 0. Scott Perry got the Western Club the decision.

Hoyt and Pennock pitched well for Boston, while Douglass and Benton turned back the Sons.

The brilliant playing of Mike McNally has been one of the features of the series. When the Red Sox began training at Hot Springs there was a big gap at second base. McNally has plugged it up.

McNally Always Good Fielder

McNally has always been a brilliant fielder. This year he has done even better in this line. He has improved his stick of second base and preventing what looked like sure hits. He has also been covering a lot of ground. Edward first base, while he goes back for short outfield flies with remarkable speed.

At the bat McNally has shown a great improvement, he has been hitting the ball hard. His ability to bunt cleverly, plus his speed, keeps the infielders guessing at all times.

The fine work of McNally gives the Sox a high grade defensive infield. Scotty at short and McInnis at first are tried veterans, while Foster at third fits well into the combination.

The Red Sox made a brave attempt to score in the third. Walters opened with a single and went to second on Hoyt's attempt to force Pennock at Boyle. McNally then came through with a single in right field, but Walters was put out at the plate on Young's perfect throw.

Fans Kauff with Man on Third

Hoyt fanned Kauff for the third out in the Giants' half of the third. But at the time Boyer was on third base as a result of a single and an error by Scott.

With two down in the fourth, McInnis singled and Foster doubled. Muffy holding up at third. Scott was then retired at the bit in front of the plate.

A great stop by McNally nipped a third rally in the fourth. A man was on first at the time and Mike got the ball to Scott in time for a forceout.

The Giants counted in the fifth. Boyle walked and stole second. Hoyt advanced to third. Kelly dashed for third and was sure of making the base. Hoyt's throw was on time but the throw was over Foster's head and Kelly scored. The Sox were unable to overcome this one-run lead.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Probably in no position on the field is the weakness of the major league teams of today so evident to the fans as in the study of third basemen. Only five of the incumbents in that position out of sixteen are of real major league calibre, and a comparison of the third baseman of today with those of either ten, fifteen or twenty years ago, shows a remarkable depreciation.

Heine Groh, a remarkable player, shows the real calibre for the position in the National, and it is rather surprising to find that the figures make Pittsburgh even an easier second as they do.

In fact, Barbare shows more figure strength than I supposed he possessed, and the dope places him ahead of Chicago and St. Louis. Chicago, in fact, owes considerable of her strength at fielding to the capable understudies of Charlie Deal, who still holds up well under wear and tear. Milton Stock makes a respectable showing.

In the American League Weaver, the "pepper pot" of the White Sox, easily ranks the field, with the grand veteran Jerry Lardner second and Vitt third. Gardner has slipped a little, losing considerable in the dope figures since his days with Boston, but he has not slipped far enough to allow any to overtake him. Vitt, I believe, has lost some points because of the smash of the Boston team last year, which probably affected his work.

Other Third Sackers Don't Rate High

The others are not much. In fact I expect to have to amend the figures in both leagues before compiling the final dope, for the reason that at present several teams are unsettled as to third base, and I have been obliged to use combination figures, average strength of two and in one case three players for the position. In the final figures I shall amend these to comply with the decision of the managers as to the candidates.

Frank Frisch probably will land an almost steady job and the chances favor the selection of Fewster as a regular—as regular as any third baseman can be with other youngsters of their calibre on the bench. The great promise of Bobby Meusel as a third baseman, probably will not be realized for some time yet, the chances are he will be placed in the outfield and given little opportunity to show his worth as an infielder until later.

It is disappointing for Meusel was touted very highly as a third baseman, and men seem to be needed in that position much more than they are in the outfield. I was interested in his case as he does not at all appear to be the build or style of a third baseman. He is tall, rangy and has great ground covering ability, rather than the sprightly and quick starting required in a third baseman. Yet Hadley, Denny, Zimmerman and a number of other great third baseman were rangy men.

Brooklyn's experiment of trying to

of third base is not great, as compared with that of other positions. Third baseman get extremely few chances, and those are usually hard ones.

The strong player with a make a third baseman out of John- stone will be watched with interest. The boy can hit and he has played well in almost every position on the ball field—not a star but a hustling, hard working ball player. If he can make good at third, even to the average, the Dodgers have added to their attacking force.

Remember that the defensive value capable infielder and cleaned up. He can block hard driven balls and recover quickly is an good, and often better than the brilliant fielder who comes up clean with the ball.

It is one of those "either you get it or you don't" jobs.

Also it is extremely strange to find so few capable third baseman playing third—a position regarded by many infielders as a cinch, and much softer than short.

There are no fewer than four men in each league who are trying to win the regular jobs away from veterans at third, and the chances are that with twenty-eight candidates aspiring to the sixteen third base jobs, several new stars may get a chance to shine.

One of the interesting candidates is Brazill, the youngster who is declared to be one of the coming sensations as third for Connie Mack.

Tomorrow we will study the short stops, where it is certain we will find more class, as well as greater difference of strength revealed by the figures.

Quincy is the mecca for soccer enthusiasts from all over New England this afternoon. The big attraction is the clash between Fore River and United Shoe, considered the two best amateur eleven in New England, in the fourth round of the national soccer championship series.

This is undoubtedly the most important soccer game of the season in New England today. It also marks for the first time in Greater Boston soccer history that two local league clubs are contesting for a place in the fifth round of the big soccer classic.

TAD'S TIDBITS

THE GREATEST FIGHTER HE EVER SAW.

Dear Tad—Don't throw this letter away until you give it a careful North and South. I want to tell you of Mobile Top Bailey, the tar baby of Harlem. He was not only the greatest fighter, but the hardest hard-boiled egg that ever lived.

Bailey would give you a load of ashes for a ton of coal any day. When he trained for a fight he'd send his sparring partner to the butcher's for 10 cents' worth of dog meat. He'd eat the meat raw and fry the fat, which was used later to rub himself with.

He never crushed rosin when Marble Top fought. They knew that he'd crush it with his skull later on.

Marble Top never lost a fight. His opponents invariably broke their hands on his think tank and the big call for the horizontal buggy always went out after a fight.

He paid his handlers promptly after each fight, then took the Jack right back with the Dixie Dominoes.

His last bout was with Clambone Fogarty, an ex-lion tamer. Fogarty socked my man on the kisser, broke his hand and quit.

Yours truly, HARRY POTTER,
Formerly Manager of Derrick Dugan.

Dempsey Keeping Fit.

Jim Corbett says that Jack Dempsey shows more horse sense than any other champion he ever saw.

"Out in Los Angeles," piped Jim, "Dempsey has a big handball court, an outdoor ring and all sorts of things to work with. He has his mother and sister with him and after his movie work stays right around the cottage, doing light work and boxing with Tate.

"I saw him quite a few times, and I'll tell you that right now he's in as fine shape as he was at Toledo, and I thought he was wonderful then."

Jeff Was a Careful Guy.

Tom O'Rourke was in a reminiscent mood the other night and batted out some yarns to a select few.

"Talking of brutal fights and fighters," said Tom, leaning back, "they're not as brutal as the writers make them.

"Why, Jim Jeffries was an old lady about himself," piped Tom with a laugh. "He had to have everything just so and he just so himself before he'd box at all. Jeff was as game as they make them, but he was fidgety and crabby about his condition. When he first came East he was to box Bob Armstrong and Steve O'Donnell on the same night at my club. He met Armstrong for ten rounds and won, but refused to take on O'Donnell, and you remember, I guess, that I papers gave Jeff a lobster decision over everything else. He injured his thumb against Armstrong and simply WOULD NOT BOX AGAIN that night. He wasn't right for HIMSELF.

"Jeff was a great fighter, I say that. I told him that O'Donnell was a spread. He couldn't fight. George Dixon had licked him at gymnasium only a week before, because O'Donnell had done something to him. Nothing could move Jeff, though. He didn't go on.

"Later, when he met and won from Fitzsimmons, all the wise boys put their roll on Fitz. I bet on Jeff myself and cleaned up. He was right against Fitz, too. They say that Fitz was drinking the night that Jeff knocked him dead. No such a thing at all. He was right. The old left hand of Jeff's fixed him. He was FITCH DRUNK the first time Jeff hit him right, you can be sure of that."

Canada Cal's Chirps.

The Mexican bean has taken a jump.

"And so the Italian workmen wouldn't work under Tierney, eh?"

"No. They said they came to America as a land of freedom, and didn't propose to be oppressed by tyranny any longer."

DOPE UPSETS IN WOMEN'S GOLF

Mrs. Price Who Meets Mrs. Hurd Today Defeated Two Favorites at Pinehurst

By ROBERT E. HARLOW.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 27.—If there were anything in the book about "Lady Giant Killers," Mrs. J. Raymond Price, Pittsburgh, would get a rating like that. She teed off early today against Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, also of Pittsburgh, for the women's golf championship of the North and South. Mrs. Price has already "done for" two sterling favorites for the title. In the first round she ousted Mrs. W. A. Gavin, South Shore, rather neatly. Mrs. Gavin has been twice a finalist for the American championship. Mrs. Price then beat Miss Elaine V. Rosenthal, Chicago, who is rated near the top of the ladder of women's golf in the country. The Western girl has won the North and South and was looked upon to have a better chance than Mrs. Price.

The two Pennsylvania golfers drove off today through a long line of onlookers for the Crown. Neither had an advantage so far as knowledge of the course went. Mrs. Price plays a long, straight, but is not so deadly around the greens as Mrs. Hurd. The latter has splendid ability from the traps, which are plentifully sprinkled in the fields and elsewhere. She is very steady and her confidence helps her a lot today.

The open event next week already almost overshadows the women's event. Pros from all sections of the country are present, without a single important absentee. Francis Ouimet has decided not to enter from the ranks of the amateurs. Hagen and Barnes are prime favorites, as usual, with Mike Brady, Charlie Hoffner, Knepper French, George McLean, Wilfred Reid, Clarence Hackney and others close up in the betting.

DYSON STILL CHAMPION, DECLARES MANAGER

Jack Leonard has taken his trusty typewriter in hand with the following result:

Boston, Mass.—Jack Dyson is still the bantamweight champion of New England, and the fact that he lost a half-the decision to Martin did not lose him the title.

It is a well known fact among the newspaper men and several managers that Martin suffered from a severe attack of stomach trouble a few days before the bout, denying that Martin was sick, but he did say that he felt that he was not at all well and that he was being at rather weights.

So that I am sure I will not lose for a match at the bantam weight. The pounds, I will not say, but I will say that I am not afraid that he will have some rights on me.

I think Abe Belasco is afraid to let Martin box Dyson at the 118 limit. But if Martin will make 118 pounds I will wager anything he wants that Dyson will beat his man as he did at the 118 limit. Dyson is the idol of the fans of Boston, and in the minds of some managers that Dyson is still the title holder and will be until some one better than he comes along and takes it away from him.

Dyson has come and will take on Frankie Burns, or any one at the weight in the country. Dyson is willing to meet Burns or Belasco at 118 pounds, but there doesn't seem to be much chance as Wilde has already run out of his match with him.

Let Joe Burman make 118 pounds and I'll wager $1000 that I can beat him. Let Joe Burman make 118 pounds and I'll wager $1000 that I can beat him. Let Joe Burman make 118 pounds and I'll wager $1000 that I can beat him.

Braves and Tigers Meet in Fifth Game of Series on Macon Diamond

By NICK FLATLEY.

Macon, Ga., March 27.—Both the Boston Braves and Detroit Tigers are now ready for the toughest kind of a session. After wandering the past few days in the unknown corners of Georgia, the travel-wearied athletes cannot be daunted. One-arm meals, sponge showers and Pullman beds are calculated to either harden or kill. Nobody has passed out of the picture yet, but everybody's feeling tough.

Arriving in Macon, where they have a regular hotel and other essentials of big league baseball, has made the playing dopesters pick the battle a bit for the fifth game, which was on here at the Tigers' training camp. It had been rumored that Tyrus Cobb was to be in the lineup, but at the time of hitting the wire there was no sign of the Georgia Peach, as they call him, probably because he never plays baseball in Georgia.

Now that Jennings has managed to grab off a game he doesn't mind the absence of the star, although the crowds where he is expected to play object quite vociferously at times. Hughey came through in the little hymeic of Eastman, probably socalled because of its size, and the fact that it folds up after dark.

Rudolph and Dauss Split 50-50

Anyhow four pitchers were taken out and worked, George Dauss and a southpaw dubbed Allen having 4 to 2 the better of little Richard Rudolph and tall Hugh McQuillen, the two great right-handers.

Rudolph and Dauss made their entry into the series Dirk going five innings and the Tiger four. Each was assaulted for two runs, one of each pair being due to an error. So it was fifty-fifty. The eventful two runs which put Detroit on the winning side of the ledger were picked off McQuillen, but never would have counted had not the stretch of right field been very much the same as where Walter Cruise attempted to haul down a fly that would have ended an inning.

But luck in everything in these games is about the same, with pitching good as far as we can see. The players do not get a great deal of practice on the hard ground and soft outfields, and the batters and swingers are right in the groove as often as not. Then, too, these conditions do not help the good spirits and harmony among the players, as all winning ball clubs.

However, the teams played the best game they have showed thus far, and the rivalry is beginning to crop up. Christy Mathewson is the center of debates and wrangles, and everything, and the engagements are rebounding to the Braves' favor. So far, with Cobb missing on the Detroit assets, Tyrus Raymond Cobb, temporarily from the Brave defence, the spectacular part of the series is seriously missing. The Western girl has won the North and South and was looked upon to have a better chance than Mrs. Price.

The two Pennsylvania golfers drove off today through a long line of onlookers for the Crown. Neither had an advantage so far as knowledge of the course went. MUGGSY HOPES TO STAGE COMEBACK MONDAY NIGHT

When K. O. Muggsy went down to defeat at the hands of Young Kiloy, he did not become discouraged but just quietly decided to get busy with his training and is now ready to stage a comeback at the Commonwealth A. Bob Brennan will battle in an eight-round semi-final with Jack O'Donnell of Roxbury. There will be two mixes: One between Young Tansino of Everett and Joe Murray of Chelsea, and the other will be between Tommy Hart, South End, and Tommy Murray of Jamaica Plain.

RICH CLUBMEN VIOLATE LAW

Social Scandal Threatened Following Reception to French Ring Hero

New York, March 27.—What threatens to become a social scandal in New York was provoked by criticism of the showing of the Willard-Dempsey fight pictures at the dinner given to Georges Carpentier at the International Sporting Club Thursday night in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Commodore.

The International Club is generally referred to as the millionaire's club because of the fact that the fortunes of many of its members run into seven figures.

The exhibition, which was attended by a distinguished gathering of men prominent in business and social life, was in violation of a section of the United States statutes which prohibits the transportation of prize motion pictures across interstate borders.

The penalty for the violation of this statute is a fine of $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than one year or both.

Members of the club refused to discuss the matter. United States District Attorney Francis G. Caffey said the showing of the pictures had not been called to his attention.

Among those mentioned as having attended the exhibition are: Major Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, president of the Boxing Commission; Major-General John F. O'Ryan, the French ambassador, Jusserand; Gaston Liebert, French consul-general in New York; Jules S. Bache, the banker, and ex-Governor Charles S. Whitman. General Coleman Du Pont said he had to fall before the pictures were shown.

HARVARD FRESHMEN TIE VARSITY SUBS

Harvard varsity substitutes and freshmen played a six-inning tie on Soldiers' Field. The subs put over their one run in the second when Jeff Jones poled safely to right and Dave Key doubled. The freshmen tied in the fourth when Charley Buell found Buck Butterfield for two bags and scampered home when Nowak singled through the box.

BRITT IS WINNER BY 'A MILE'

New Bedford Battler Beats Y. D. Champion in Ten Out of Twelve Rounds

The mighty Casey never struck out in more hollow fashion than did Kloby Corcoran of Lawrence succumb to the skill of Frankie Britt of New Bedford at the Kenway A. A. show in Mechanics.

Ten thousand saw the Mill City idol shattered by the smashing and pounding of his at least ten pounds lighter opponent. Hundreds of his faithful followers watched in vain for his spurting right to register and saw it only pay widely in the air.

For not once did the old mule kick of the Y. D. vet land with the setting necessary for a knock-out. It either landed with Britt pulling away or whistled through the smoke-laden air. It was Britt's fight in every round save the fourth and the last, when the New Bedford bearcat did the least scoring and which rounds were practically even.

It was a pretty fight to watch. Britt was at his best. Kloby was willing but never permitted to get for the sleep producer. Britt beat Kloby to the punches, tied him up in veritable knots, jarred, flopped and slashed him in the clinches, traded blow for blow in the infighting and as often stood his ground as he gave way under the bull-like rushes of the veteran.

Britt Makes Kloby Look Like Novice

Kloby looked like a veritable novice before the science of Britt, who carried the fight to the Y. D. boy most of the time, leaping in with straight left or whacking right crosses solidly to the jaw. In the eleventh Kloby was plainly weary and hanging on, but in the twelfth he came back in the last minute with all his bulldog-like tenacity and showed his best flash of the bout, which looked all the better because Britt, with the fight won, chose to give way before the terrific onslaught that Kloby had started for the first time.

There were many who deplored the fact that Kloby did not start his wild high-and-low attack earlier, but they overlooked the point that he couldn't start Britt on top and in no time. Kloby could not get set, and before he did spurt it was to find Britt solidly set up well into the ring for his left. It was the case of the elephant trying to locate the flea, and when he did find him, the flea developing into a boa constrictor.

Might Have Handled Crowd Better

The huge crowd was not as well handled as that of the Muggsy-Kloby bout, for there were no accidents, and only a few belligerents to step over the right to seats, but the aisles on the floor were jammed, to the disregard of the law. Before the bout the fire department cautioned the promoters to the danger of the aisles. Only the motions of clearing were made, however. If there is a fire Chief Cox is against smoking in the hall, it, too, went by the board.

The semi-final was eminently satisfying, with Johnny Noonan of Dorchester getting the decision in the first round go over Johnny Giblin, his old opponent of Roxbury. Noonan showed the better wares and dropped his man in the ninth. Giblin, however, was a willing worker and came back strong. In the preliminaries, Johnny Brown of Newport overcame the educated left of Willie Green and chased the habitual smile off the South End boy's countenance for the decision in the eight-round go. A bout between Young Quill of Brockton and Hammering Howe of Woonsocket was a miserable exhibition, ending in a draw.

Phil Powers refereed the prelims; Noah Perry, the main bout.

NEW BILLS AT MANY THEATRES

Stars of Movie World Featured in Screen Plays Coming Here Monday

LOEW'S ORPHEUM THEATRE

An all star bill has been arranged for the coming week at Loew's Orpheum Theatre, headed by the celebrated Golden Troupe of terpsichorean artists, comprising a rare collection of Russian singers, dancers and instrumentalists, in "Kremlin of Moscow." The company includes eight specialty artists. Senator F. Murphy, chairman of the committee, discussing topics of the day, will also prove a rare treat. His hosts of Boston friends always welcome him to the Hub. Lew Welch and company will offer a splendid one act comedy styled "The Prodigal Father," which is heralded as something entirely new. Blair and Crystal in a tuneful skit with songs and sayings will add merriment to the bill.

GORDON'S CENTRAL SQUARE THEATRE

A striking contrast between the high and low walks of life is drawn in the photoplay, "A Daughter of Two Worlds," from the novel of the same name by Le Roy Scott, which will be shown at Gordon's Cambridge Central Square Theatre, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Norma Talmadge, who is starred as Jennie Malone, plays the part of the beautiful daughter of Black Jerry Malone.

MODERN AND BEACON

The program at the Modern and Beacon for the coming week includes three big productions, which will be shown for the first time in Boston—"My Lady's Garter," "The White Dove" and "Cleaning Up," the latter being the latest Al St. John comedy.

"My Lady's Garter" is a Maurice Tourneur production of Jacques Futrelle's famous Saturday Evening Post serial of the same name. The central figure of the story is "The Hawk," a notorious international crook who has purloined the historical jeweled garter of the original Countess of Salisbury.

H. B. Warner is starred in "The White Dove."

WALDORF THEATRE

Next week at the Waldorf Theatre will be presented two entirely new programs of musical comedy and feature pictures. For the first half of the week the Waldorf Musical Comedy Company, with Danny Lund and his bevy of beautiful girls, will offer "A Family Affair," a tabloid musical comedy never before seen in this city. The feature photoplay will be Viola Dana in "Some Bride." Thursday will witness an entirely new program, with Hale Hamilton in a brand new picture, "Is His Brother's Place."

LOEW'S GLOBE THEATRE

A quartet of exceptional photoplay attractions have been secured for the coming week at Loew's Globe Theatre. For the first half of the week George Walsh will be shown in "A Manhattan Knight," which was adapted to the screen from "Find the Woman," which is a widely read novel. It is a mystery play of unusual interest, and gives George Walsh a wide scope for his abundant talents.

"THE ETERNAL LIGHT"
TREMONT TEMPLE

Holy Week will be observed at Tremont Temple by the presentation of "Eternal Light," a massive film production of the famous "Passion Play." This great religious screen drama has been presented during Lent at Boston College, and was filmed under the auspices of the Catholic Art Association. The story was arranged and edited by O. E. Goebel and Conde B. Pallen.

UPHAM'S CORNER STRAND

A motion picture that is said to have called forth endorsements from the Governors of several States, leading civil and educational authorities, and other prominent personages as a mighty Americanization influence, will be the feature picture on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Upham's Corner Strand. It is the big Thomas H. Ince production, "Dangerous Hours."

CODMAN SQUARE THEATRE

The headline photoplay is one of unusual magnitude and of compelling interest. It offers a series of tense and exciting situations while the love interest is genuinely human. The bill will be changed on Thursday. For the regular Sunday night concert many attractive numbers of vaudeville and photoplays will be shown. The doors will be thrown

TETRAZZINI CONCERT

Luisa Tetrazzini will give a concert in the Boston Opera House Easter Sunday afternoon. She will be assisted by James Goddard, bass.

With rare appreciation of the customs of Bostonians to retire before the mystic midnight hour, John Henry Mears, who is taking the Century Midnight Whirl upon the road, proposes to begin at the regular theatre hour, and in a theatre rather than on a roof. Most Boston roofs are too much.

One of the most pleasing features of the New York midnight shows was the habit of the young ladies to stroll among the tables and get bald headed gentlemen on the cheeks. Boston's theatre regulations prohibit the chorus from working in the audience. Mears accordingly has hit upon the bright idea of placing a few tables on the stage and letting some of the audience come up.

Thus the truth of the old adage will be demonstrated that there are more ways of killing a cat than by hitting its head off.

This Century Whirl, by the way, is exceptional entertainment even without the aid of champagne and the midnight chafing dish. Its chorus contains a large number of professional beauties who have never been tempted to leave New York before. They come as a token of esteem for John Henry Mears who managed the first midnight show ever given by Ziegfeld and who has been in the midnight business so long that the sun hurts his eyes when he sees it, which is seldom.

Heaving Bricks at the Editor.

What makes a show good and bad, and who has the final say is always coming up for discussion. Nobody ever settles it. Last week I mentioned that certain entertainments have been escaping doom this Winter because people who never went to the theatre before are going now and liking the wrong thing.

This was not mentioned as attacks upon the whole proletariat, of course; only that portion of it which had bad taste—and the final judge of bad taste, in this column at least, is none other than yours truly.

A friend of mine who likes the rough stuff took me to task for my remarks regarding his kind of entertainment, and told me that critics didn't know anything about the theatre anyway. He was present at a certain entertainment. It was a wonderful show and if I said it wasn't then I didn't know what I was talking about.

Of course everything is relative, and good, bad and indifferent are a matter of opinion. One has a right to his opinion, and I have a right to mine, but I can get mine printed and he can't.

One of the chief reasons for the divergence of opinion of the habitual and the occasional theatregoer is the fact that after the regular has heard the same joke fifteen or twenty times it doesn't amuse him, and when he has heard variations on the same old tune just as often he doesn't hum it, buy a copy from the song-plugger and bang it out on his piano.

On the other hand the occasional theatregoer thinks the joke and the song are fresh, and likes them. There is only one bad thing upon which everybody can agree, and that is an egg.

Go Out of the Crowd.

The Republican barber of "The Royal Vagabond" is one of the characters you remember. Roger Gray, who plays that role, is doing more than being funny, he is giving one of the best satirical characterizations of ranting Republicanism ever put on the stage.

Gray was educated to be a lawyer. He played football with the University of Minnesota and went in for college theatricals very ardently. After he secured his sheepskin he went into a lawyer's office. Three months was enough. He eloped with a musical stock company bound to another town and never returned. Gray says: "Any of the legal profession is overcrowded, anyway."

Home Entertaining.

To me there is nothing more unpleasant than good music indifferently performed. Recently recording a scene in "39 East" at which various talented boarders are called upon to assist in entertaining is funny enough, but it recalls unpleasant memories. How many times have you called on a girl to have her parents come in leading little Johnnie who plays "Ben Hur Chariot Race" considerably against his will, or little Mary to be learning to play the violin. "She has pieces now. Play them new pieces for the gentleman, dear."

Even the Italian border frankly avoided the young ladies who played the quiet duets that he hated to hear so. The audience admired his nerve. Many pleasant evenings might be passed if everybody had equal courage. Look the hostess square in the eye when she asks you if you would like to hear some music, and say "I hate all pianists save Paderewski, all violinists except Kreisler, and all singers save Caruso."

Undressing Rooms.

"They ought to call this my undressing room," declared John Cumberland at the Plymouth a few nights ago. "Do you realize that I don't wear anything but a union suit and a bathrobe all through the play?

"Well, I don't have a chance to show a single evening gown," replied Doris Rankin. "I am in negligee for the whole show."

"You should worry," complained the chap who plays the butler. "Look at the holy show I have to make of myself without any trousers and in a flaming unbuttoning shirt, don't you know."

"Cheer up," consoled Al Woods. "Summer is coming, and you three will have the laugh on the actors who have to be dressed up."

Extra, Basil Exists.

Just to show I don't know everything, William Raymond Sill comes back at me with proof that there is an under, Basil McDonald, a combination of names I presumed to doubt last week. I also got a letter from Basil asserting the same thing but expressing much indignation that an unscrupulous press agent had got possession of his tender missive to Helen Hayes, and tried to get publicity out of it. Basil added that he was considerably over twelve years of age as asserted by Sill, and that he did not sent Helen violets. He sends poems, not violets. Violets are expensive. Well, Basil may have written the first poem, but Sill is positively author of the following sent in credited to Basil:

Yes, alas, my name is Basil, tho of Celtic strain I be.
Still I never will be a vassal to his British majesty

Mother read of curfew's ringing
when one Underwood must die.
As poor Bessie shrieked to heaven,
grabbed the clapper in her mit.
Saving Basil from one Cromwell,
somewhere back in '46.

It gets worse as it goes on. At any rate the hero of Cerfew was Basil Underwood.

Smelt a Resemblance.

Willie Collier and George McKay, who are furnishing the laughs in "Honey Girl," were going up Seventh avenue, New York, about 3 a. m., not so long ago when they noticed a man sitting on the sidewalk with his back against the building, hat pulled over his face, slumbering vociferously, and surrounded by an aroma of alcohol. This was not in pre-prohibition days, either.

George went over to him, lifted the sleeper's hat and disclosed a bald-headed man with a large black mustache.

"Wonderful," said George admiringly, "simply wonderful resemblance to Daniel Webster."

"I don't get you," said Willie. "What possible resemblance can there be between this soiee and the great statesman?"

"His breath," replied George.

Likes His Own Show.

I saw Morris Gest in New York a few days before he sailed for Europe. His first question was for "Chu Chin Chow" at the Boston Opera House.

"How do you like it?" he demanded.

"Oh, yes."

"Ah," said Morris, "How lovely it must be. Now I know why we should have sent it anywhere else in Boston."

Only One English Actor.

There is only one English member of the cast supporting Mary Young in "The Outrageous Mrs. Palmer" at the Arlington, and that is Rupert Lumley.

Mrs. Palmer is supposed to be an English star visiting America country. Her son and daughter have become Americans, but her husband, the second, is straight from the old country. So a regular Britisher was essential and Lumley is it. Mine Young essays a British accent as Mrs. Palmer with very good success, and as remember an accent in an emotional role is an easy task. The piece will remain in Boston another fortnight, and then go over to show something to Broadway.

Romberg Sticks Up for Art.

Sigmund Romberg, composer of "The Magic Melody," "Maytime" and other well-known operettas is not discouraged by the popularity of jazz. He declares:

"Simply because the cabarets and some theatres resound with trashy jazz is no more proof that the real American public prefers that sort of music than the prevalence of cheap sex magazines on the news stands indicate that Americans prefer naughty stories to real literature. A really good song from a high class operette will beat out in popularity the jazz song of the moment and will be sung when the jazz is forgotten. "Sweethearts" from "Maytime" gained preference in the homes of this countryover any jazz song of the day, and I am told by the publishers that "Once Upon a Time" from "The Magic Melody" is holding its own with the ragsy stuff."

SHUBERT THEATRE

Novelty and originality will be found in the "Century Midnight Whirl" which John Henry Mears will present at the Shubert Theatre, by arrangements with Morris Gest for a two weeks' engagement beginning Monday night, March 29. There will be the usual realness during this limited engagement of two weeks, on Wednesday and Saturday.

The famous "Century Midnight Whirl" has been keeping New Yorkers awake from midnight until dawn in that gay city for the past three years, and it is something entirely new in the way of theatrical offering, and will show a brisk, rapid-fire style of entertainment full of music, dancing and pretty girls. It will be the first time in theatrical history that a real midnight show, as New York has learned to know it, and to love it, will be presented in Boston.

The lyrics of the "Century Midnight Whirl" are by Bud de Silva, John Henry Mears and Joseph McCarthy. It is staged by Julian Mitchell and Edwin Royce, and the music is by George Gershwyn and Harry Tierney.

In the cast which Mr. Mears has selected, Hessis McCoy Davis is the featured member and the entire program revolves around her exquisite personality and graceful dancing. Others who will help to keep the Whirl spinning are Frank Fay, Winona Winter, Felix Adler, Jay Gould, Kyra, the dancer; Annette Bade, May Hennessey, Kathryn Hatfield, Daisy DeWitt, Bettina Allen and thirty-six famous century girls, the millionaire chorus.

GAYETY THEATRE

Is it possible to put on an artistic burlesque show that will be acceptable to the patrons of that form of amusement is answered by "Girls a la Carte" at the Gayety Theatre. For here is a show that in every sense of the word is an artistic triumph both in its scenery and its costuming and for the chorus of young, beautiful girls.

There are a class of people who, although they never attend an extravaganza performance, are always ready to decry that class of entertainment and hark back to the days when burlesque was only patronized by men. It would be a good idea for some of that class to witness performance of "Girls a la Carte" next week and see how different it is from what they expected it to be. If they are broad minded they will then "acknowledge their mistake," and maybe it has happened in a great number of cases) they will become a weekly patron—and join the merry throng of ladies and gentlemen that find fun and relaxation in modern burlesque.

WALDRON'S CASINO

For the coming week at Waldron's Casino beginning with a matinee on Monday, the attraction will by Barney Gerard's newest offering to patrons of burlesque, "Girls De Looks," a budget podge of mirth, music, beautiful girls, handsome scenery and costumes replete with a cast of principals that many a Broadway manager would bill as all-star, the same being headed by a pair well-known comedians, Jos. K. Watson and Will H. Cohan, who made such a big hit here last season. The book used to exploit his newest organization, Mr. Gerard is responsible for having collaborated with Hoey and Lee. Mr. Gerard has engaged an excellent supporting company and a bevy of young and beautiful girls. The Sunday entertainments now begin at 2 o'clock and there are no repeats.

KEITH'S THEATRE

Valeska Suratt, the famous musical comedy star, will be the headliner at Keith's next week. She will be seen in a strong company including Eugene Strong and Walter C. Percival in "Scarlet," a remarkable playlet by Jack Lait.

Olsen and Johnson will be seen in a skit full of new nonsensical songs, burlesque, ventriloquism and violin and piano playing—all loaded with laughs. Eddie Foyer will exhibit in the course of his work the most remarkable memory in the history of the stage. He is not only a humorist of the first water, but a repository of literature.

MALDEN AUDITORIUM

"Are You a Mason?" will be revived by the Temple Stock company during the coming week at the Malden Auditorium. Never has a more hilarious farce been written than this age-old laughing vehicle. It is brimful of the brisk and snappy dialogue that never fails to please, with situations that appear impossible to untangle.

"MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE"

Seats will go on sale Tuesday for Gilbert Miller's London production of the Andre Messager romantic opera, "Monsieur Beaucaire," which, under the management of A. L. Erlanger, will be the week attraction at the Tremont for a limited engagement, beginning, Monday, April 5. In the big company are such well-known performers as Marion Green, Blanche Tomlin, Leonox Pawis, John Clarke, Spencer Trevor, Marjorie Burgess, Robert Parker, Isabel Rhys and Robert Cunningham.

HERE'S FRED STONE

Fred Stone, the Peter Pan of clowns, comes to the Colonial Theatre in Charles Dillingham's musical extravaganza "Jack o' Lantern" for an engagement of three weeks only beginning Monday, April 5.

LOEW'S COLUMBIA THEATRE

A startling array of motion picture stars in their late production are offered for the coming week at Loew's Columbia Theatre, headed by William Russell, William Fox's great cowboy star, in "Shod With Fire," and a Hampton production, entitled "The Westerners," for Monday's program.

"NAUGHTY FLORENCE"

Keen interest is being manifested in the forthcoming presentation of "Naughty Florence," a new comedy written by Edward Harold Crosby, dramatic editor of the Boston Post, for the first time on any stage at the Somerville Theatre on Monday matinee, April 12.

"TILLIE'S NIGHTMARE"

Playgoers of this city have a treat in store for them when Marie Dressler plays an engagement in her greatest success, "Tillie's Nightmare," at the Boston Opera House beginning Monday, April 5.

WM. COURTENAY IN "CIVILIAN CLOTHES"

What will no doubt prove welcome news to Boston's playgoing public is the announcement that William Courtenay in "Civilian Clothes" will open at Selwyn's Park Square Theatre, on Monday evening, April 12. "Civilian Clothes" is one of the big outstanding successes of the season.

O'SULLIVAN PROGRAM

A feature of the concert to be given by John O'Sullivan, for the League of Catholic Women at Symphony Hall next Sunday evening, April 4, will be the singing by the Irish tenor of "Hail to the K. of C.," a new song by James Ecker, which was sung by O'Sullivan at his great K. of C. concert in Chicago, two weeks ago.

LYCEUM SCHOOL CONCERT

Thomas R. Lothian and Grover C. Bluthardt, the managers and the treasurer of the Colonial Theatre, will give their annual concert and reception on the evening of April 11. As a yearly event, these concerts have attained a popularity unsurpassed by any of the unusual excellence of the bills offered, the artists appearing being members of visiting attractions.

LIPKOWSKA CONCERT

Lydia Lipkowska, the beautiful young coloratura soprano of the first rank, who has been touring Germany, has returned to America after eight years, and will give a concert in Boston on Wednesday afternoon, April 14th. Miss Lipkowska has enjoyed a brilliant career since leaving Boston. She has appeared in Berlin with the old Royal Opera House, Munich, Monte Carlo, Vienna, St. Petersburg and Moscow. She escaped from the Russian Bolsheviki with the aid of a French torpedo boat captain and crew via Odessa and the Black Sea. She married the French naval officer and brought him to America with her. Lipkowska, since landing in America, has appeared in New York in "Aigolette" with the Chicago Opera Company.

McISAAC says that

"39 EAST," at the Wilbur, is as sweet and wholesome as the breath of kine. Delightfully performed by Constance Binney and her company.

"DERE MABEL" remains another week at the Tremont. Based upon the popular doughboy letters, only one act deals with uniforme. Mostly about Bill's tribulations after being mustered out.

"GIRL IN THE LIMOUSINE," Mr. Wood's trousersless farce comedy, continues to draw. A very remarkable cast, headed by Doris Kenyon and John Cumberland, Plymouth.

"HONEY GIRL," Sam Harris' musical comedy, based on "Checkers," caught on. It's just a snappy dancing show. Park Square.

"BAB," with Helen Hayes, is a dainty and ingenious comedy of young folks, exquisitely done by Miss Hayes and the rest. Hollis.

"THE ROYAL VAGABOND," Cohan's opera comique, is getting ready to leave Boston. One of the best operettas of the season. Colonial.

"MAGIC MELODY" is a sumptuous light opera, with vaudeville attachments. Romberg's music is merry, and Purcell's singing is appreciated. Majestic.

"CHU CHIN CHOW" remains only one more week. Hardly likely that this great spectacle will return, so don't miss it.

MARY YOUNG, in "The Outrageous Mrs. Palmer," continues her remarkable run at the Arlington, but the last few weeks are announced.

BARRYMORE OUR BEST ACTOR

John Barrymore, who comes to the Park Theatre next week in the film version of "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde" has recently been acclaimed by America's severest critics as the greatest tragedian of the American stage, his remarkable performance as "Richard Third" having won him this distinction. This brings to mind the fact that young Barrymore possesses a wonderful advantage over the great tragedians of former generations.

Whereas, Booth, Barrett, McCullough and the rest could act only for their own generation, and departing left behind them only memories in the brains of the oldest inhabitants, young Barrymore through his work in the screen drama is making a permanent monument for himself.

Ages hence when some ancient authority rises to announce that some budding actor cannot act Jekyl and Hyde the way Barrymore did, for example, it will only be necessary to run off the film of our greatest tragedian in the role to settle the argument. This will not only be an advantage to Barrymore and his career, but it will make life much easier for the younger critics of the future generations.

Seventeen Cardinals Saw It.

No other motion picture production ever shown on a local screen was subjected to so critical a board of censors as that which passed a unanimously favorable decision on "The Eternal Light," the massive film production of the Passion Play, which will be shown at Tremont Temple all next week.

Seventeen members of the College of Cardinals sat in judgment on this magnificent production in the great hall of the Pontifical Biblical College in Rome. These prelates selected to view and criticize the film before its public exhibition were authorities on biblical history, and censored the picture not only on the score of its artistic value but of its historical accuracy.

How finely the band of directors who superintended the army of actors taking part in the production has done their work was illustrated by the fact that the Cardinals found but in no particular was the production to be improved, and the latter perfect as regards historical accuracy and was voted as perfect a piece of artistry as human brains and hands could produce.

The Lee Child in Big Part.

Virginia Lee Corbin, one of the most beautiful and talented children of the motion picture world, has a big part in "The White Dove," the feature attraction of next week at the Modern and Beacon theatres starring H B. Warner. She plays the little daughter of an English physician, which latter character is the central figure of the photoplay.

Little Miss Corbin is eight years old, and was born in Prescott, Ariz. As a very small child she was an artists model. She has had leading parts in a number of fairy tale pictures which were produced.

Olive Thought Up the Plot.

Olive Thomas, the screen star, is responsible for the plot of "Youthful Folly," in which she appears at Loew's Orpheum next week. The idea was suggested by the career of one of her co-workers in Ziegfeld's Follies years ago. Miss Thomas did not write the scenario, this being out of her line, but she turned over the plot and made many suggestions.

Mum Overheard.

During the filming of "Shore Acres," the Metro picturization of James A. Herne's world famous stage play, which will be the feature attraction at Scollay Square Olympia, beginning Monday, the company of film actors were thrilled by Guy Polley, the head location representative, falling overboard. The company was taking night scenes on a sailing vessel in San Francisco Bay, when Polley lost his balance and plunged into the water. Members of the company threw a line, and, after some manoeuvering, the carpenter was hauled safely back on board. He expressed himself as rather chilled by his sudden and unexpected "dip," and explained that the plank upon which he was standing had slipped.

In James A. Herne's celebrated play many scenes are laid along the seashore, for the story, it will be remembered, is situated on the coast of Maine, where the two brothers, Martin and Nathaniel Berry, are the keepers of a lighthouse. It is in this lighthouse that the climax dramatic struggle between the two brothers takes place, during the wreck of the ship that is bearing the daughter of Martin away with her lover is leaving the harbor.

Alice Lake is the star in "Shore Acres," having been made so after her notable work in "Should a Woman Tell?"

The Olympia News Weekly, a new comedy and an excellent bill of vaudeville, headed by the Brown Trio, complete a wonderfully good program.

Love Him Who Tells Thee Thy Faults in Private for a Good Friend

Magazine Page

This Day in History—March 27, 1920

THIS is the anniversary of the founding, in 1703, of St. Petersburg by Peter the Great. Inducements were offered to settlers to live in the marshy islands in the Neva, and the new city speedily became a commercial centre for the Baltic.

The Mohammedan New Year

THE Moharram marks the beginning of the Musuiman's New Year, but the date is movable, and determined by the moon. It chiefly commemorates the death of the martyrs. All, the prophet's son-in-law; Hasan, his grandson poisoned by his wife!, and Hosain, the younger brother, killed at Kerbela.

THE YOUNG DIANA

Story of Tense Mystery in Which Heroine Holds Key to Youth

By Marie Corelli

What Has Gone Before

Diana is the spinster daughter of well-to-do commonplace parents. The May family resides at Rose Lea, an estate on the coast of Devon. She overhears her parents discussing her age and declaring that she is in the way. She goes bathing and fails to appear for breakfast. Her clothes are found neatly folded near the water's edge. While there is mourning at Rose Lea, Diana is talking things over with her friend, Sophy Lansing, in London. She goes to Geneva to answer a strange advertisement of a doctor for a woman of mature years.

NEVER had she felt so well; health bounded in her pulse and sparkled in her eyes, and the happy sense of perfect freedom gave to every movement of her thin, supple figure, that elasticity and grace which are supposed to be the special dower of extreme youth, though, as a matter of fact, youth is often ungainly in action and cumbersome in build. She had stayed two days and nights at a great little hotel in Geneva en route, in order to rest well and thoroughly, after her journey from England before presenting herself at the Chateau Fragonard, the residence of the mysterious Dr. Dimitrius, and she had made a few casual yet careful inquiries as to the Chateau and its owner. Nobody seemed to know more than that "Monsieur le Docteur Dimitrius" was a rich man, and that his chateau had been built for him by a celebrated French architect who had spared neither labor nor cost.

He was understood to be a scientist, very deeply absorbed in difficult matters of research—he was unmarried and lived alone with his mother. Just now he had so much to do that he was advertising in all the papers for "an intellectual elderly lady" to assist him. Diana was indebted for this last "personal note" to a chatty bookseller in the Rue du Mont Blanc. She smiled as she listened, turning over some of the cheap fiction on his counter.

Went to Chateau

"He is not suited yet?" she inquired.

"Ah, no, Madame! It is not likely he will be suited! For what lady will admit herself to be sufficiently elderly? Ah, not it is not possible!"

Later on, she learned that the Chateau Fragonard was situated some distance out of Geneva and well off the high road.

"Madame wishes to see the grounds?" inquired the cheery driver of a little carriage plying for hire. "It would be necessary to ask permission. But they are very fine!—Ah, wonderful! — as fine as those of Rothschild! And if one were not admitted, it is easy to take a boat and view them from the lake! The lawns slope to the water's edge."

"Exquisite!" murmured Diana to herself. "It will be worth while trying to remain in such a paradise!"

And she questioned the willingly communicative cocher as to how long it might take to walk to the Chateau?

"About an hour," he replied. "A pleasant walk, too, Madame! One sees the lake and mountains nearly all the way."

This information decided her as to her plans. She knew that the eccentric wording of the Dimitrius advertisement required any applicant to present herself between 6 and 8 in the morning, which was an ideal time for a walk in the bracing, brilliant Alpine air. So she determined to go on foot the very next day: and before she parted with the friendly driver she had ascertained the exact position of the chateau, and the easiest and quickest way to get there.

And now—having risen with the first peep of dawn, and attired herself in that becoming navy serge "model," which her astute friend Sophy had borne triumphantly out of the French tailor's emporium, she was on her way to the scene of her proposed adventure.

She walked at a light, rapid pace —the morning was bright and cool, almost cold when the wind blew downward from the mountains, and she was delightfully conscious of that wonderful exhilaration and ease given to the whole physical frame by a clear atmosphere, purified by the constant presence of ice and snow. As she moved along in happiest mood, she thought of many things—she was beginning to be amazed, as well as charmed, by the various changes which had, within a week, shaken her lately monotonous life into brilliant little patterns like those in a kaleidoscope.

The web and woof of Circumstance was no longer all dull gray, like the sober her father had judged most suitable for her now that she was no longer young—threads of rose and sky blue had found their hopeful way into the loom.

Her days of housekeeping, checking tradesmen's bills and flower-arranging seemed a very long way off; it was hardly credible to her mind that but a short time ago she had been responsible for the ordering of her parents' lunches and dinners and the general management of the summer "change" at Rose Lea on the coast of Devon—that fatal coast where she had been so cruelly drowned! Before leaving London she had seen a few casual paragraphs in the newspapers concerning this disaster, headed "Bathing Fatality"—"An End of a Lady"—or "Drowned while Bathing," but, naturally, being a nobody, she had left no gap in society—she was only one of many needless women.

And it was an altogether new and aspiring Diana May that found herself alive on this glorious morning in Switzerland; not the resigned, patient, orderly "old maid" with a taste for Jacobean embroidery and a wholesome dislike for the "snap-snap-snarl" humors of her father,

"I never seem to have been my own real self till now!" she said inwardly. "And now I hardly realize that I have a father and mother at all! What a tyrannical bogy I have made of my 'duty' to them! And love is another bogy!"

Her Heart Beat

She glanced at her watch—one of Sophy Lansing's numerous dainty trifles—"Keep it in exchange," Sophy had said, "for yours which your bereaved parents are going to send me as an 'In Memoriam'!" It was ten minutes to seven. Looking about her to take note of her bearings, she saw on the left hand side a deep bend in the road, which curved toward a fine gateway of wrought iron, surmounted by a curious device representing two crossed spears springing from the centre of a star—and she knew she had arrived at her destination.

Her heart beat a little more quickly as she approached the gateway—there was no keeper's lodge, so she pulled at a handle which dimly suggested the possibility of a bell. There was no audible response—but to all appearance the gates noiselessly unbarred themselves and slowly opened. She entered at once without hesitation, and they as slowly closed behind her. She was in the grounds of the Chateau Fragonard. Immense borders of heliotrope in full bloom fringed either side of the carriage drive where she stood, and the mere lifting of her eyes showed masses of flowering shrubs and finely-grown trees, whose their shadowy branches over velvety stretches of rich green grass, or opening in leafy archways here and there to disclose enchanting glimpses of blue water or dazzling peaks of far-off snow.

Dumb Negro

She would have been glad to linger among such lovely surroundings, for she had a keen comprehension of and insight into the beauty of Nature and all the joy it offers to a devout and discerning spirit, but she bethought herself that if Dr. Dimitrius was anything of an exact or punctilious person, he would expect an applicant to be rather before than after time. A silver-toned chime, striking slowly and musically on the sunlight silence, rang seven o'clock as she reached the Chateau, which looked like a miniature palace of Greek design, and was surrounded with a broad white marble loggia, supported by finely fluted Ionic columns, between two of which on each side a fountain played. But Diana had scarcely time to look at anything while quickly ascending the short flight of steps leading to the door of entrance; she saw a bell and was in haste to ring it. Her summons was answered at once by a negro servant dressed in unassuming dark livery.

"Dr. Dimitrius?" she queried.

The negro touched his lips with an expressive gesture signifying that he was dumb—but he was not deaf, for he nodded an affirmative to her inquiry, and by a civil gesture invited her to enter. In another few seconds she found herself in a spacious library—a finely proportioned room, apparently running the full length of the house, with large French windows at both ends, commanding magnificent views.

Humoresque

Screen Version Novelized by Jane McLean

Fannie Hurst's Story in a Tense Film Drama Featuring Alma Rubens

Watch for It in Motion Pictures

"Humoresque" is a Cosmopolitan production. Remarlo by Frances Marion, direction of Frank Borzage. Presented by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as a Paramount-Artcraft picture.

"YOU don't understand, Leon," Abraham insisted. "It's Elsass wants to see you—he's ready to sign"——

Leon shook his head. "I can't do it—I can't!"

Abrahm started at the boy and then at the mother. "There thousand a concert," he said almost roughly. "You should see him." He opened the door and the white-haired man on whose commendation hung the fate of aspiring musicians came in smiling, hand extended.

"Congratulations." He shook Leon's hand. "Splendid; never heard anything better. I've been talking with your father and I made him a proposition—what do you think—or perhaps he hasn't told you?"

Leon nodded. "Very generous, Mr. Elsass, but I can't take it."

The face of the other clouded a little. "You won't mind telling me why?" he asked.

"No"—the violinist looked at his mother as he spoke to Elsass—"I'm going into the army."

"Leon," a great cry broke from Mrs. Kantor's throat—the father stood silent, as one stricken. The manager nodded. "If I were younger I'd go, too," he said, and bowed himself out as if there were no more to say.

Mrs. Kantor's face roused the pity of her son—"Mamma, you musn't feel that way—I've got to go, don't you see, I've got to go."

"No." Abrahm's voice broke in, "you go to fight for Russia—no—no son of mine."

"Wait a minute, papa. I go to fight for this country—this country that has made us all rich—we owe something back—I'm going to pay it—I'm going to pay the debts of the Kantor family."

His Mother Terrified

"But your playing," his mother groaned, "suppose you get hurt then—you couldn't do it—Leon—if you didn't have a gift—but you couldn't do it."

"Listen, mamma, when I saw all those people, your people and mine, sitting there and listening and dreaming—I knew what they were thinking—they were thinking of their boys who'd gone or were going—thinking of them when they were little fellows and running around the way I used to run around in Allen street. I don't want them to point to me and say that because God gave me a gift I'm a slacker with it—no, mama, you see how it is now."

Her arms were about his neck and her tears were flowing as she answered him; there was a smile on her lips, a smile between the tears as she stood back to look at him. "Why, my boy, I want you to go——"

Abrahm interrupted, "You want him to go?"

"I want him to go if he feels like that—and so do you, Papa."

A knock at the door and Gina Berg and her father peered into the room. "Come in—come in," said Abrahm, "come in and see our new soldier——"

"Soldier?" Gina echoed the word fearfully.

"Leon's going to the war," said Mama Kantor, "isn't it fine, Mr. Berg?"

Gina and the young man were clasping hands—"is it true, Leon?" she asked.

"True, Gina," he answered, "maybe I'll be a general before I get back."

"I saw Elsass," said Mr. Berg, "and I thought perhaps you were signing up with him—a fine judge of music."

"Leon wanted me to sign," said Leon, "but I couldn't."

"Of course not." Mr. Berg agreed and nodded to his daughter. Gina smiled her farewells. "Perhaps we'll see you before you go, Leon," she called back.

The rest of the family drifted in —Esther and Issy—all eager for news about Elsass—all stunned by the revelation that this brother of theirs, the money getter, the genius, the gifted boy with the soul of fire, was going to enlist.

"You'll be an officer, at least," Issy urged, beginning to think of himself as a possible candidate for the draft.

"No, I'm going to enlist as a private."

"Like all the others; oh, no, Leon—I can't let you—it's too hard."

Leon did not argue the point. He returned home with the family in the capacious limousine that bore his father's initials and cost him the net proceeds of four concerts.

And while Esther and Issy discussed the wild scheme of their contrary brother, he slipped out and returned at dinner with the little bit of pasteboard that took away his identity as the greatest violinist of the land and transformed him into one of several million servants of Uncle Sam.

Leon became a doughboy and in the face of the fact there was nothing more to say.

Leon Jubilant

Leon was jubilant—that little bit of cardboard did the work of a genii, silenced criticism, sidetracked objections. For himself he felt better; he was at rest; he had done what he knew he should have done, and the reaction was stimulating.

There were affairs to be straightened out, money matters to be put in order; fortunately, the Kantor family was secure from the phantom of want that had stalked so long at their heels. Leon's earnings, wisely invested, were producing enough to keep them in affluence. And that was all he cared about. That and Gina.

He made his plans to go to the training camp—Camp Mills—and theirs, the money getter, the genius, the gifted boy with the soul of fire, was going to enlist.

When he appeared in his khaki uniform Mamma Kantor hardly knew him. The brown suit seemed to her the visual evidence of her loss. Leon was going tomorrow. Going to leave them; she tried to cheer herself with the promise that she would motor down and see him every Saturday.

"Twill be a Summer of week ends," she said gayly.

She nodded, tears back of her smile. His father, now that the die had been cast, boasted of his son's action.

"Just like Leon," he told his friends, "nothing should keep that boy back—nothing—what would you have, I ask you, the way he was brought up——"

But the fact that he was enlisting as a private rankled in the heart of his daughter. "You should get him a commission, papa," she urged, but Abrahm shook his head; he knew better than to press the matter. And Leon went away with a knapsack across his shoulders, leaving his precious violin safely reposing in the safe in the big house.

Before the time came for the departure of his company, the Kantors had gotten used to the idea—Mamma Kantor especially, making a virtue of necessity, declared with vigor that the training was doing Leon good. His appearance bore out her judgment. He was stronger, ruddier, more virile than he had been for years.

Time to Depart

Among his messmates the advent of the big car each week-end caused comment, but Leon was the most unassuming of buddies and chaffing left him undisturbed.

The Summer wore on and the time came when new men must fill the camps and those already there must go to fill the thinning lines of the allies pitted against the hordes of Von Ludendorff. Rumor became fact and Leon departed for a few days with his family before his embarking for Europe. Swift days filled with endless little attentions from his mother and anxious glances from his father.

Bachelor Girl's Reflections

By HELEN ROWLAND

Copyright, 1920, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

THE most interesting Spring announcement: "I love you!"

From the hustle with which the modern divorcee rushes from the court room straight to the marriage bureau apparently a woman will try anything twice!

Clothes——and the Woman.
They have cut out our sleeves and our backs!
They have shortened our skirts ad lib.
They are charging three prices——and tax.
For a gown just the size of a bib!

Youth: That rainbow-tinted period, when a man can't decide whether a kiss is an amusement, an adventure, a risk, a sin, a luxury or a sacrament.
Age: That terrible moment, when he decides that a kiss, after all, is—just a kiss!

If "scientific salesmanship is selling a suit of clothes to a man who comes in, intending to buy a collar," what IS making a man give you a wedding ring when he only intended to give you a kiss?

It doesn't do a flapper any good to see a stage vampire suffer for her sins when the star wears a gown that any girl would be glad to suffer and die in!

Don't fancy your husband's love is dead merely because he sneaks in by the back door with his shoes in his hand. Wait until he comes boldly in the front door at 3 a. m., without bothering to deceive you.

The portrait of an old bachelor's heart would probably resemble a bowl of cracked ice.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Copyright, 1920, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

ENID

PERHAPS the sole example of a name which maintains its original beauty and dignity, and is without derivatives or diminutives is Enid, signifying soul. The first and immortal Enid was made so by Tennyson, who rescued from oblivion the charming idyll of Geraint and Enid and placed them among the chivalry of the Round Table. This story was found in the "Mabinogeon," and a "Triad" mentioned Enid as one of the three ladies of the King Arthur's court. She is as beautiful a picture of wifely devotion as the patient Grisell.

Copyright by Harris & Ewing

The name Enid is a Celtic form of animus, meaning soul. It is not difficult to perceive how the successive changes came about, through different pronunciations. Anid was probably a connecting link in the transition and for euphony, the word became Enid. All this must remain supposition, however, as there is no accurate history concerning the name, so she is accepted as a poetic fact and as such her reign long since established in England, France and America.

She appears as Enide in the French verse of Christen de Troyes, but she is better known as the wife of the Prince of Devon of romance, whom Tennyson describes in his "Enid and Elaine":

"The brave Geraint, a knight of Arthur's court,
A tributary prince of Devon, one
Of that great order of the Table Round,
Had married Enid, Yniol's only child,
And loved her, as he loved the light of heaven.
And as the light of heaven varies, now
At sunrise, now at sunset, now by night,
With moon and trembling stars, so loved Geraint
To make her beauty vary day by day,
In crimsons and in purples and in gems.
And Enid, but to please her husband's eye,
Who first had found and loved her in a state
Of broken fortunes, daily fronted him
In some fresh splendor; and the Queen herself,
Grateful to Prince Geraint for the service done,
Loved her, and often with her own white hands
Arrayed and decked her, as the loveliest,
Next after her own self, in all the court."

Enid's jewel is the beryl, which has the power to reawaken love in married people. It likewise makes the wearer amiable and inconquerable. To dream of it signifies happiness in store. Monday is said to be Enid's lucky day and 3 her mystic number.

The Two Voices

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

"POOR Ruthie." You—who could never sing nor play for any one else—mother or me or your most intimate friends—without almost passing away—have to do both for the Rodneys!"

Then, as she saw the look on her sister's face, she changed her tone.

"Don't be hurt, Ruthie! I did not mean anything—only it did strike me as very funny. For you know how you have always declared that your fingers got numb and your voice husky if you tried to perform for an outsider."

Ruth Confesses

"I know it," Ruth groaned. "And I still feel that. I suffered horribly when I had to play for Hugh. It was not until he called me by your name that I got up courage to attempt it. Then I realized that I was impersonating you, and need not think of myself."

Doris smiled. "I am flattered," she said genuinely, "to be represented in music by you. You know as well as I do that your voice is ten times better than mine."

"That is beside the point," Ruth objected. "The fact remains that Hugh wants your songs—not mine. And there is an especial one that he says you and he like—and he seemed wounded when I spoke as if I did not know what it was—as I had to pretend that I did know. Can you think what song it is?"

Doris reflected for a moment.

"He says he used to quote it to you," Ruth suggested.

"Oh, I know what it is!" Doris exclaimed. "It is—'I'll Await, My Love. Yes—he used to quote that often."

"Oh, dear!" Ruth moaned.

"What's the matter?"

The younger girl had to confess the reason of her discomfiture. "I was so afraid that he would detect who I was when I promised to sing it for him tomorrow. And—it is a song I do not know at all."

"You can learn it."

In Absolute Darkness

"I cannot—before I go to the Rodneys again. I shall not have an hour to spare. Moreover, I have heard the song only once, and if I tried to sing it, he would wonder at me—since I, as you, am supposed to know it perfectly. It is impossible for me to learn it in the short time I have. I cannot practice it tonight after the rest of you are in bed," she ended, with a nervous laugh.

"Poor Ruthie!" Doris was in a gentle mood this evening.

She pondered the moment, then made a startling suggestion.

"I could go to see Hugh with you tomorrow afternoon and could sing that song for him.

"You!" Ruth ejaculated, amazed.

"Yes—for I really don't mind so much if you will surely go with me—and if I need not be alone with Hugh. I will tell him that Ruth and I have come around together—if you are positively certain that he cannot see a thing."

"Oh, he cannot," was the abrupt rejoinder.

"Well!" Doris demanded. "Will you accept my offer?"

Ruth thought swiftly. The plan that Doris proposed seemed the simplest way out of a difficult situation.

It would be easy to make Hugh believe that Ruth had at last come voice husky if you tried to perform for an outsider.

It would be easy to make Hugh believe that Ruth had at last come voice husky if you tried to perform for an outsider.

Hugh doesn't look very dread ful, does he?" Doris asked.

"No," Ruth replied. "And, anyway, the part of the room in which he lies is shaded by a screen across the foot of his bed, so that he cannot see anything. It is best for him to have the direct rays of light shine on his face, the doctor says. There is no sign of his discovering the difference between you and me. Thank you for offering to go, and to sing, Doris. I do not know what I should do otherwise. I do appreciate it."

"Oh, that is all right," rejoined Doris, with the magnanimity of the selfish who accept all and give little. "I am perfectly willing to help you out."

One night, about two weeks ago, I picked up a paper and saw your Dr. True's Elixir, Family Laxative and Worm Expeller advertised, and as my mind I had worms, and the next day bought a small bottle of Dr. True's Elixir was surprised at the result almost from the first dose. The day before I took Dr. True's Elixir I had a pain across the top of my head, like a nail being driven into it, and was crawling in my stomach. I feel like a new person. My friends say I look so much better. I would've have believed anyone could feel so much better in such a short time. I can't give your medicine praise enough.

LAWRENCE JEWELER'S SON BADLY BEATEN

Lawrence, March 27.—Maurice Gerdon, aged sixteen, son of a local business man, lies at the point of death in a Boston hospital as a result of a severe pummeling at the hands of thugs, who attacked him on the street here. The police are in doubt as to the motive of the holdup. Robbery is thought to have been the cause as the boy has been employed at his father's jewelry store and carried jewelry at times. He was found unconscious on the sidewalk at Hampshire and Park streets. He has suffered a lapse of memory since being attacked.

PROFIT TAKING AT THE END

General Motors and Stutz Receded Market Is Very Active

By W. H. ROSS.
Financial Editor

Stocks were irregular at the close in New York, the market weakening in the last hour. Almost all the leaders were in the recessional. Many of them closed with losses. Realizing selling caused the reaction. The market was very active for a Saturday session, the hour transactions totaling about 425,000 shares.

Stutz and General Motors were among those to show the largest losses. U. S. Steel lost all its early advance and most of the weak stocks were Crucible, Corn Products, Texas Co., Baldwin, Bethlehem B. and Stromberg. They were down from one to more than five points before the close.

Strong issues included Mexican Petroleum, Royal Dutch, Stewart Speedometer, Chandler, American International and Atlantic Gulf. Their highest they were up from one to seven points.

ADVANCES AT THE OPENING.

Advances were the rule at the opening, but initial changes averaged small. Exceptions were American International, Atlantic Gulf, Mexican Petroleum, Texas Co. and Royal Dutch. They gained from one to three points on first sales. Stutz started at a new high record figure and bettered it at once. General Motors was the most conspicuous among the few stocks to recede at the start. It opened at a decline of two points, and within a few minutes was off eleven. It became quieter than it has been for weeks. It was the only weak motor at the outset. Steels were active, as were oils and equipments. Profit taking began at once, and some of the leaders lost their gains. But the market remained strong during the first hour. Chandler was another issue to sell at a new record high price. It soared eight points on a few transactions. U. S. Steel sold at the highest figure it has reached on the present upward movement.

STUTZ STOCK CONTROL.

A local financial publication says Wall Street information is that the leading interest in Stutz told the business conduct committee of the New York Stock Exchange, of which he is a member, that he either owned or controlled approximately 40,000 of the 100,000 shares of the company's stock and was willing to lend stock to those wishing to borrow it under short contracts, but that when shorts decided to cover "they would have to settle on his terms."

It was said in trading circles that the advance of Steel common has been more disconcerting to bears than anything that has recently happened in the market. Five per cent. call rate which carries over until Monday, gave bulls courage. The drop to that figure was a surprise all around. Covering of shorts this morning was on a scale indicating a decided reversal in sentiment.

THREE MORE ARRESTED IN MILLBURY ROUNDUP

Worcester, March 27.—State, Worcester and railroad police have made the first of the arrests which they claimed would follow the investigation of the attempt to rob the payroll of a Millbury factory. Albert Zickell and Virgini Dori, both of No. 68 South Quinsigamond avenue, and Louis Delalio, of No. 10 Alden street, were arraigned in District Court today charged with breaking, entering and larceny. The men were all alleged to have entered a railroad freight car the B. & M. road in December and stolen $1,000 worth of cigarettes.

Zickell is a concrete block manufacturer and well known here. The other two men work for him.

Mass. State Bond Sales

State Treasurer Burrell will receive bids until 12 noon Wednesday, March 31, 1920, for the purchase of $7,968,000 Cambridge Subway bonds. These bonds are registered, bearing interest at the rate of 4½ or 5 per cent. per annum, and exempt from taxation in Massachusetts, including the federal income tax.

COPPER SHARES STILL STRONG

Boston Market Strong, With Carson Hill, Elder and Bighearts Its Leaders

Prices advanced in Boston when the exchange opened and the upward movement was general. Trading was usually active in the early, especially for a week-end session. Coppers continued to command trading interest and dealings in them were on about the same scale as yesterday. Calumet & Arizona was the most prominent issue in this department. Carson Hill and Elder were the market leaders and both were strong. Bighearts also maintained its hold on public interest. But it was not as strong as the two stocks just mentioned.

Gains of a point or more were made by Calumet & Arizona, Copper Range, Old Dominion, Osceola, Quincy, Carson Hill, Elder, Hancock, Magnesio, Massachusetts Gas, Libby and Swift International. Fractional advances were registered by Butte & Isle Royale, Island Creek, Stewart, United Shoe, Eastern Manufacturing, Wickwire, Foot and Van Dervoort, Davis Daly, New Cornelia, Waldorf and Walworth.

Amoskeag was the weakest issue, receding a point and a half at its opening. Ventura soon lost its slight gain. Stocks to decline less than a point included Ohio Body, Orpheum and Mexican Investment. Bighearts opened a shade higher and later sold unchanged or at a small loss.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NOTES.

It is figured on the basis of ten months past that Elder Manufacturing should show earnings this fiscal year to the end with April 1, 1920, of from $940,000 to $1,000,000 after setting aside $50,000 for preferred dividends, a balance before taxes equal to more than $16 a share for common to be declared.

Regarding Carson Hill, President William J. Loring says: "I don't see any objection in what the stock market does with Carson Hill. I know the property and I know what has made good every prediction I ever made for it. The lower we go, the richer the ore becomes."

President Anstar of the Shannon Copper Co., which is going into oil development is visiting petroleum fields in the Southwest to inspect leases and acquaint himself generally with the situation.

Mason Valley Coal Co.'s production for 1919 was 301,454 tons, a decrease of 279,746 tons from the 1918 output. Its profits were equal to $0.97 a share on the 212,920 shares of capital stock outstanding with $1.64 a share in 1918.

For 1919 the Island Creek Coal Co. reports net profits after all reserves of $1,196,902 as increase of $52,289 as compared with 1918. After preferred dividends 1919 profits of $156,000 were equal to $7.45 a share on common stock, compared with $7 a share in the previous year.

STOCK DIVIDEND IS NOT CONTEMPLATED

When asked about a Wall Street report that his company might declare a large stock dividend, President Philip T. Dodge of the International Paper Company said: "There is not a word of truth in the rumor. There are no stock dividends in prospect. We are running the business to make paper and not to speculate in stocks."

Gold Exports and Imports

Up to yesterday the gold received in New York from England on the present movement totalled $2,450,000, but the Red Star liner Lapland, due today, has $2,000,000 forwarded from London. However, it is also announced that $200,000 in gold coin has been withdrawn from the New York sub-treasury for shipment to Ceylon. This is the second consignment reported in March for that British possession.

Penn. Road Stockholders

Stock of the Pennsylvania Railroad continues in favor with small investors. At the end of February this year its stockholders numbered 131,586, an increase of 13,484 in a year. It is being bought in small lots, as a decrease of 9.36 to $2.13 in the holdings average would indicate.

Town and City Loans

Harris, Forbes & Co. have lent the Town of Agawam, Mass., $100,000 in anticipation of taxes. The rate is 5.72 per cent. and the maturity Nov. 12.

Nashua, N. H., has sold to the Second National Bank of Boston $50,000 5 per cent. 5½ year bonds at 100.11, a basis of 4.95 per cent., in anticipation of revenue, dated March 29, and maturing December 1, 1920.

"DAYLIGHT SAVING" BY THE BOSTON EXCHANGE

There will be "daylight saving" on the Boston Stock Exchange as well as on the kindred institution in New York. Beginning Monday next hours of trading on the Boston bourse will be from 9 a. m. to 2 p. m., excepting Saturdays, when trading will cease at 11 a. m. The delay in adoption of the "Daylight Saving" scheme in the State prompts this change of hours.

The Clearing House department has made following rulings: Statements must be sent to the Clearing House before 9:30 a. m. and checks be sent in not later than 9:30 a. m. Assignments for receipt of securities will be given at 10:45 a. m. Assignments for delivery of securities, also checks, 50 share lots and stamped comparison sale forms will be given out at 11:15 a. m. Settling prices will be sent over the tape at close of business at 2 p. m., except on Saturdays when they will appear at 11, a. m. The comparison department will close at 2 p. m. daily and on Saturday at 12 noon.

PROPOSALS

OFFICE QUARTERMASTER GENERAL, Commonwealth Pier, Fish Pier, Northern Dist., Boston, Mass., March 27, 1920. Sealed proposals in triplicate

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN MARCH 27, 1920 BOSTON.

SENATE SHOULD PASS THE DAYLIGHT SAVING BILL AND ROUT THE RAILROAD LOBBYISTS

By whose order has the Daylight Saving Bill been held up in the State Senate? Why has the demand of 750,000 citizens of Massachusetts been scorned; and why have the leaders of the Senate and the Boston Chamber of Commerce made an about-face on this necessary legislation? Has the railroad lobby become paramount on Beacon Hill? Are Massachusetts State Senators and the Boston Chamber of Commerce the servants of the railroads or of the people?

These questions should be answered, and answered at once. The bill which passed the lower house by a vote of 181 to 38 is a popular bill. It is demanded by a vast majority of the citizens of this State. In public it was agreed that this bill should be carried through to a successful conclusion. We are now informed that at some dark-closet conference, or by some back-stair manipulation, the vote on the bill, which was to have taken place in the Senate on Friday, was postponed until next Tuesday, with the sole purpose of delaying action on the bill until the end of April. It is even stated that this action means that the bill will be delayed again in April, and ultimately, at the behest of the railroad lobbyists, will be delayed again so that the demands of the people of Massachusetts will not be granted.

It is not too late to act on this bill. It comes up for action next Tuesday, and should be passed at once so that it can go into operation on Sunday, April 4.

Seven hundred and fifty thousand citizens demand this be done; 181 members of the lower branch of the Legislature demand that this be done, and the Chief Executive of the State views the measure with favor.

Senators, pass the bill at once!

The British Empire Might Be League of Free Nations

The news dispatches from Europe tell us that British statesmen are much concerned about the recent election in South Africa. The result appears to be a victory for General Smuts, but the spirit of independence is very strong among the Boers. A declaration of independence by the Republic of South Africa is greatly feared in Britain.

One of the causes of the discontent at the association of South Africa with the British Empire is the belief that South Africa has been exploited in recent years by British profiteers in England. It is an interesting fact that the South Africans complain very much as the Irish complained some years ago at the exploitation of Ireland by competitive English interests.

Few people in America realize what cold-blooded, murderous use the English made of their power over Ireland whenever it served any considerable English interest. When the sheep raising industry in Ireland became large and prosperous the English sheep raisers caused a law to be passed in Parliament destroying the sheep raising industry in Ireland.

For generations each time that Ireland developed some industry that competed with English industry the English interests boldly and unblushingly demanded that Parliament should destroy the Irish industry, and as boldly and unblushingly Parliament did destroy the Irish industry.

We do not know what may be the truth concerning the grievances alleged by the South Africans against the English, but it is significant that their dissatisfaction with the British Empire is worrying British leaders. The cement which binds the parts of the British Empire together is not very strong these days. Egypt and India are in practical revolt, and the necessities of England's control of India make her intrigue with Japan, Australia's most feared neighbor.

The embarrassment of the British Empire in this respect is more than appears on the surface. That the condition in Egypt is also worrying the British appears clearly from an editorial in one of the ablest of the British publications. The Egyptian people are boycotting English goods, just as the Chinese are boycotting Japanese goods, and for the same reason—that they resent the imperialistic domination by these two powers.

England sent Lord Milner on a mission to reach some compromise with the Egyptians which would remove the boycott, because, since it touches Britain's pocket nerve, it worries her a great deal. The editorial in the London Nation declares that the failure of the Egyptian mission occurred because Great Britain has no policy in Egypt, and it continues in these significant words:

This the Government must find, and in our view it should be the cancelling of the Protectorate, and the substitution of a free Treaty with Egypt, restoring her independence, and fully safeguarding her interests in the Canal and in her Eastern policy. These guarantees we are sure we could get. The old unfree Empire is dying, and we want no addition to it in Egypt, veiled or unveiled. And the new Commonwealth wants friends and allies, not subjects.

If Britain could bring herself to recognize and anticipate with good grace the inevitable, she has within her own empire a nucleus of a League of Nations. The glory of the British Empire as a laboratory of experiment for a successful League of Nations in which England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, Egypt, India, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa are independent, equal associates, sovereign each with respect to the other and voluntarily associated, would exceed the glory of an empire, very much expanded, that is based upon force.

Another Instance in Which Consumer Is Overlooked

Two facts brought out at the Interstate Commerce Commission's hearings on how to apply the new railroad law should not escape notice.

The first is that both railway security holders and railway managements concur in urging book valuation as the only feasible basis for fixing the guaranteed rates. Book valuation, of course, in most instances, means inflated valuation.

But this is less surprising than the second fact that many organizations of shippers are indifferent to what the rate basis is, or how high it goes, so that they can be assured of due service. They are quite willing to charge high rates back, with a profit.

The consumer was not consulted in the drafting of this law, and he is in danger of being overlooked in its enforcement.

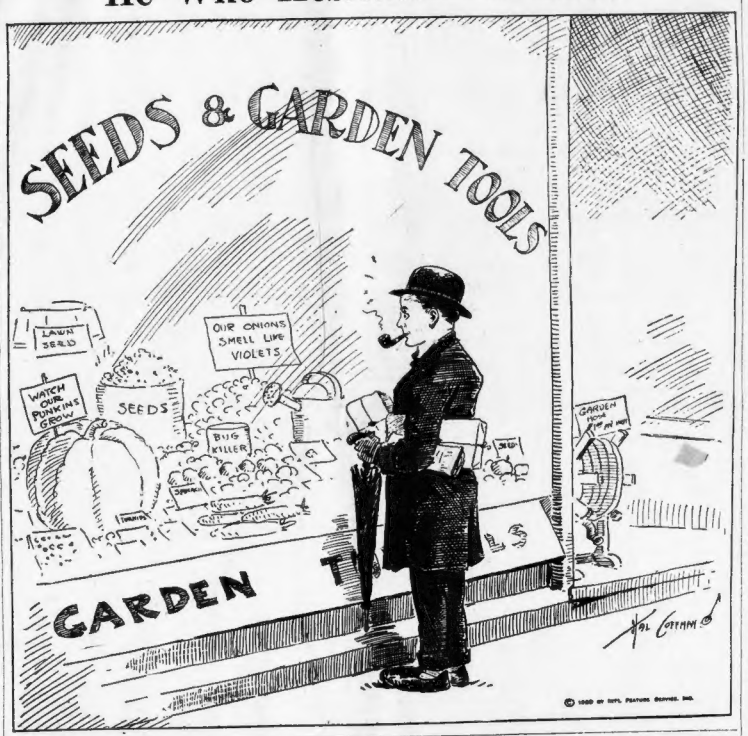
Take What You Can Get

Sir George Paish wanted a $15,000,000,000 American Government credit when he landed here. But by the time he got back home he had arrived at the opinion that $1,000,000,000 would do very well.

Sir George reminds us of the Western politician at the beginning of the first Cleveland administration.

He came East to demand the ambassadorship to Great Britain, after a long and discouraging sojourn in the anterooms at Washington he was willing to compromise on a pass home.

He Who Hesitates Is Lost



More Truth Than Poetry

Seasonable Signs

By S. E. KISER

THE crowd will soon go crazy when the home team scores a run,
The mosquito will be squeezing through the screen;
The huntsman from the city will be crouching with a gun
Where no unsuspecting duck is ever seen;
And each eager candidate
Who would guide the ship of state
Will be saying many things he doesn't mean.

THE tuneful street piano and "da monk" have come again
To lure the dancing children down the street,
And presently the people who are fleshy will complain
That their shoes have grown too little for their feet;
But the Bock Beer sign no more
Will be noticed as of yore—
We shall miss that dear old, fine, artistic treat.

THE feathered warblers blithely have begun again to warb,
The frogs will soon be busy kicking loose;
The golfer pays a dollar for a dimpled little orb
That soon, alas, is not of any use.
He counts his strokes and sighs
And grows bitter as he tries
To drown his grief in loganberry juice.

THE profiteers are busy marking up their wilted wares,
The stench of burning rubbish fills the town;
The beds are piled in corners and the halls are full of chairs,
The weary missus greets us with a frown;
And tomorrow we'll be told
That the house has just been sold—
It's a gay life, if you keep from breaking down.

By K. C. B.

EVERY MORNING.
AT THE breakfast table.
I'D TELL everybody.
HOW WELL I'd slept.
AND THEY'D seem to be glad.
AND LAST night.
WE ALL went to bed.
AT THE usual hour.
AND RIGHT away.
I WENT off to sleep.
AND HAD a dream.
I WAS on a car track.
AND THE motorman.
WAS CLANGING his bell.
TO SCARE me off.
BUT I couldn't get off.
AND THE car hit me.
AND I awoke.
AND HEARD a cowbell.
RIGHT IN the yard.
AND THE bell kept ringing.
AND I got up.
IN THE blackness of night.
AND STEPPED off the porch.
IN MY bare feet.
AND STARTED over.
TO WHERE it was.
THAT THE sound came from.
AND GOT some stones.
AND THREW them over.
WHERE THE bell was ringing.
AND FOUND some rags.
AND WIPED my feet.
AND WENT back to bed.
AND IT started again.
AND ALL night long.
THE BELL kept ringing.
AND I made up my mind.
THAT WHEN dawn came.
I'D KILL the cow.
AND DAWN came.
AND I saw the rancher.
SNEAK OUT in the yard.
AND TAKE down a bell.
AND WIND up a rope.
THAT RAN to his room.
AND AT breakfast time.
I DIDN'T say anything.
TILL SOME one asked me.
HOW I'D spent the night.
AND I lied about it.
BUT ANYWAY.
THE RANCHER man.
HAD TO stay up all night.
TO RING the bell.
I THANK you.

Exclusive Presentation of Facts on Ireland

THE Irish Republic is already an accomplished fact. Sinn Fein is actually functioning as a de facto government, with well organized departments and courts that are respected and whose orders are obeyed by the people in many sections.

These are among the striking statements of a non-Irish commission, the British Parliamentary Labor Commission of Inquiry, which has reported to London after an extended tour of Ireland.

The full report was suppressed in Great Britain, and its substantial facts are published for the first time in America exclusively in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

The report proves all the assertions of Bostonians and other residents of New England who are buying the Irish bonds, that the transactions are being made with a working government.

The report concludes with a declaration for self-determination for Ireland. It declares that all attempts of England to remedy agelong economic wrongs and oppressions must inevitably fail—for, says the document, the political problem in Ireland far overshadows all purely domestic questions. These, it adds, can only be remedied when the political scheme is fulfilled to the satisfaction of the Irish people, and then by them alone.

English domination of the Irish people is denounced. The report declares military rule of Erin has wiped out and now suppresses all forms of liberty—free speech, right of public social gatherings; even musical entertainments and games—and says that when Dublin Castle rule is not simply unintelligent it is "deliberately provocative."

The Boston Sunday Advertiser will publish the music and words of the new Knights of Columbus song by James Ecker, Boston pianist and composer. Sung by John O'Sullivan, Irish tenor, in Chicago, it caused a furore, and now it's coming to Boston. Mr. O'Sullivan will sing the K. of C. song at the concert to be given next Sunday evening in Symphony Hall under the auspices of the League of Catholic Women to launch the league's fund for a diocesan centre.

How to solve the problem of the home by the securing of servants is treated by Congressman Isaac Siegel in an article, written for tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser. Congressman Siegel defends the newcomer to America, and urges liberal treatment of him in order to end the labor shortage in this country.

The congressman, who is a member of the House Committee on Immigration, is opposed to the proposal to forbid immigration for two years. He protests against unwarranted criticism of the foreign-born, and declares many public officials are "exploiting the Red scare in America." Women voters, he believes, will solve the problem of illiteracy.

Farm produce will cost more in New England this year, says Willard A. Munson, new director of the State Division of Markets, because the acute shortage of labor will result in a materially decreased production. He explains why the farmers could not exist under an eight-hour day law, and suggests a number of methods by which the situation could be improved.

Israel Zangwill, the famous novelist, arraigns England for its double dealing with Russia. "British policy toward the Russians is dominated by a gang of politicians lacking both conscience and honesty. America is a member of the Holy Alliance which has adopted a Shylock attitude," he writes.

"The imperialists have invented lies about Russia, and their censorship has kept the people from knowing the truth. They are gambling in human lives."

Winston Churchill, Secretary of State for War in the English Cabinet, urges Great Britain to help Ebert and his government. He warns the allies of the imminent danger of a German union with Russia should sovietism triumph in Berlin.

Secretary Churchill advocates a lasting peace with Germany, but at the same time believes in giving France and Belgium assurance that England will come to their defence if they are ever again wrongfully attacked.

Letters to the Editor

Foreign War Veterans

Editor Boston American:

The editorial in the edition of March 22, timely and admirably pointed, demanding that the American Legion immediately adopt a definite plan of action for the benefit of its members in this vital matter, has the hearty endorsement of all real veterans, but, in justice to the older service organization, the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, I feel it my duty to take exception to a statement in the editorial making it apparent to the casual reader that no efforts have been made by any other body to secure favorable legislation in this direction and that "the Legion ought to lead it."

Unheralded and without the blare of trumpets, but known and appreciated by the thousands of comrades, the Veterans of Foreign Wars has unhesitatingly "taken the lead" and through the tireless efforts of its Legislative Committee presented to Congress an adequate measure framed by a former soldier and present judge advocate-general of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Congressman Royal C. Johnson of South Dakota.

The Johnson back pay bill (H. R. 7,925), based on length of service and embodying no demand on "charity," awards to all who served in the armed forces of the United States a fair compensation for that service. Incidentally, I will add, this measure has been in committee (Ways and Means) since September, 1919, as Chairman Fordney informed the writer, awaiting action of the Legion in convention, the committee having passed the buck."

GUSTAV R. HOFFMAN,
Commander, Post No. 299, V.F.W.

Patriotic Services

Editor Boston American:

Through you I express my admiration of the wonderfully patriotic service rendered our country by Mr. Hearst and his papers. The saving for our own mercantile marine of the ex-German ships is a work equal to that done by our armies in France. We are all disabled soldiers here and more than appreciate the good work. Mr. Hearst sure went "over the top" at Cape May Hospital. My home is at 15 Medford street, Charlestown, Mass.

Making Converts

Editor Boston American:

I wish to state that I enjoy the way you hammer at the League of Nations and the Shipping Board and have said many times if we had more of your type this would be a better U. S. A. Keep it up, as I know of quite a few converts to the American.

JOHN C. KEYES.
